The Challenge

Most enterprises run Order-to-Cash on fragmented systems and manual processes, creating delays in onboarding, invoicing, cash posting, deductions, and collections, leading to slower payments, higher costs, and lost recovery.

Credit Management Bottlenecks

Onboarding new customers takes weeks because applications are incomplete, data must be manually pulled from financials and agencies, and approvals require back-and-forth with customers and business units.

Invoicing Blind Spots

Customers don't have a single portal to view and pay invoices. AR teams spend hours reformatting and manually uploading invoices to customer portals, creating delays and frequent disputes.

Delayed Cash Posting

Remittances arrive across checks, emails, PDFs, and bank files with inconsistent formats. Analysts must manually match them to invoices, causing unapplied cash and slowing collections.

Inefficient Deduction Handling

Analysts waste time downloading claim documents from 600+ portals and emails and validating mostly valid claims just to find a few invalid ones, delaying resolution and reducing recovery.

Manual Collection Efforts

Collectors lack prioritization intelligence in their worklists, chasing low-risk accounts and drafting manual follow-ups. At the same time, AR teams waste hours reformatting invoices for AP portals and uploading them one-by-one.
